

The registration of a firearm ties that firearm to the licensed owner in the Canadian Firearm Information System (CFIS), as data on both individual firearms licencees and individually registered firearms is contained in this database. The CFRO, a subset of CFIS, is available to Canadian police agencies via the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC) system to assist them when responding to calls and conducting investigations. In this searchable application, police officers may query the name, address or firearms licence number of an individual or the serial number or registration certificate number of a firearm. CFRO provides police with real-time access to the information they require in their investigational and operational activities.
